Item # 6

Dinner at Victor's Café in Philadelphia

One hundred years ago a young Italian, John DiStefano, settled in Philadelphia. He brought with him little more than a great love for classical music and grand opera, and shared it with the City by opening a music store. Upon the repeal of Prohibition in 1933, and in response to grim economic times, his Gramophone Shop became The Victor Café, “Music Lover’s Rendezvous.”

In years gone by, arias and instrumental solos, with the occasional soliloquy or poetry recital, were performed by patrons. Then, an opera student working at The Victor Café began singing for patrons and the tradition was born. Now, every twenty minutes the waiters take a moment between courses to ring a bell, announce a performance, and fill the café with song.

Item # 40: 2 bottles of Canadian Ice Wine (Pondview Vidal and Cabernet Franc)

Item # 41: 2 bottles of Canadian Ice Wine (Inniskillin Riesling and Vidal)

Item # 42: 2 bottles of Canadian Ice Wine (Chateau des Charmes Vidal and Cabernet)

True ice wine requires a cold climate where grapes are harvested frozen on the vine. Fortunately, in Canada, Germany, Austria, and the US, dessert wines are not allowed to be labeled as ice wine if grapes are commercially frozen. You will see these products usually labeled as “iced wine” or simply “dessert wine.” So, if you’re looking for true ice wine, be a wary shopper and read the labels or look up the production information.
